Davison had received Appelbaum's kick of an exchange of punts followed on which the Purple gained thirty yards when the ball was allowed to roll out of ounds on Columbia's 25 yard line. Shaw returned the ball to midfield and the Massachusetts boys started an attack that resulted in their first and only score. Card and Zink made it a first down on way around Columbia's left end and on a dash for the Blue and White goal posts. He skilfully cluded all the Columbia tacklers and only Shaw got in his way. The Columbia halfback spared to tackle, but as Card swerved to pass on his opponent's right Shaw slipped on the wet turf and Card easily placed the ball behind the Columbia goal Zink kicked goal, putting the visi-

Robertson improved as the game pro-

The slope of the ground and the un evenness of the playing field bothered both booters. The chief reason why Robertson missed so many goals from the field was the slope of the ground. Accustomed to play on a level surface it was difficult for him to guage his kicks on the Polo Grounds incline. Besides the successful field goal from the forty-seven yard line Robertson made one other beautiful though unown forty yard line Robertson attempted a sixty yard field goal. He got away a beautiful boot and missed the target by inches only.

Cornell Wins Toss.

Cornell won the toss and Capt. Shiver ick chose to defend the east goal with the wind at his back and the ground three and this number was increased to five in the third period. With the game apparently won, the local boys relaxed in their efforts and this nearly spelled their ruin, for Amherst again started ten yards. Dartmouth held strong and slope in his favor. Murphy kicked off to Shiverick on Cornell's five yard line and the Ithaca captain ran the ball to play and came within an ace of win-ping the game. Shiverick was forced to punt. It looked like a Cornell Waterloo when Dartmouth like a Cornell Waterloo when Dartmouth opened up, for on its first attack it shoved the Ithacans back for a first down. Cornell quickly found itself, however, and it was not till the second quarter that Dartmouth really became menacing.

After making the first down hear the start of the game Robertson got away a corking thirty yard forward pass, but Jordan dropped it and it went for naught. The Bos onians never were dangerously near to the Army goal line, with a single ex-ception. This came in the final quarter when an Army man was banished for when an Army man was cansated for slugging and the Cadets were set back half the distance to their goal line which put the ball on Army's 28 yard line. But even with this advantage the visitors could do nothing with the Army

They did launch this play to good advantage several times, but always when they were well down in their own outkicked Fitzpatrick every chance, and there was a deal of kicking throughout. Heaphy, Bostons pivotal man, was played off his feet and had no time to rove to-day. The great-est part of the Army's gains went the Tigers had been off side. Colgate's hero was Belford West, captain and left tackle. West played one of the great greatest line games yet seen on a Princeton field. He played not only his side of the line but frequently swung over to take care of the other side too. He was an impassible barrier on defence and a terrific smasher

McGraw, the Princeton right tackle and captain, was so far celipsed that there was no comparison. But McGraw need not feel disgraced for West has been an all-American tackle these three years.

Princeton showed only a fairly developed attack. Jim Knox and the other Harvard scouts who were on the scene saw little outside of a forward pass which sometimes went over the line and then from back to end. Colgate did not show much either. Its forward pass was not the brilliant play it used to be three years ago. And its smashes off tackle were not as knifelike, either. But the Maroon showed itself to be resourceful, powerful and possessing the rhythm which is essential for success.

Attack of Losing Eleven Features Contest.

Special Despatch to Tan Bux. ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 25.—In a game which made the midshipmen get down when the visitors did not put up a star defense, and they showed much ability in the open attack which was a feature of the contest. The Navy started the game with the strongest backfield which could be picked but two early changes rather disorganized it, and it was no until the final quarter that the new combination shook itself together and showed its ability to advance consistently. On the whole, the game was er Bucknell played Navy to a standatil in the second quarter, and scored in the third in the third of two plays of the spectacular kind. With Navy holding the ball on Bucknell's thirty yard line Ebner intercepted a forward pass on his own twenty yard line, and ran to Navy's ten yard line where Koehler stopped him. Bucknell fumbled on the next play, but Kinds' punt was short, and a forward pass of Bowser's was received by Dent over the line. On Kostor's try for goal, the ball hit the post above the bar and bounced back.

Navy received the first kick off, Benoist running to the Navy's twenty-five yard line. In a series of drives most of them off tackle, with Alford an Clark generally carrying the ball, and helped by one forward pass, from al-ford to Clark, the ball was taken to Bucknell's ten yard line. There a stal-wart stand caused the ball to pass over on downs. Bowser punted to the thirty-five yard line, at this stage, Koehler took Alford's place, and Rawlings was substituted for Clark. Rawlings ran fifteen yards, and, after a few short gains, Koehler took the ball over and King kicked goal.

Navy's Goal in Danger.

The second quarter opened with Buck nell holding the ball a little in the Navy's territory. A combination of criss cross and forward passes, Ebne taking the ball, accounted for fifteen yards, the first substantial gain for the visitors, and they followed it with a first down in two tlays, Bowser and Mangal carrying the ball. This put Navy's goal line in danger, but a stand on the ten yard line saved it.

King punted, and the visitors were not again so near scoring, though the midshipmen fought in their own lot during the rest of the quarter. Though the Navy kept the ball in Bucknell territory most of the third quarter fine catch and run of Ebner put the visitors in position to make their only score of the game, while the midshipmen were blanked. In the final quarter, the midshipmen woke up to the fact that it was the turn to do some gridiron stunts. The opportunity came when Bucknell had re-ceived a kick inside its ten yard line carried it ecross. Again King's trustred toe did the thing it was called upon to do, the game ending shortly after though not before Bucknell had uncovered a
